T41. NATIONAL BUREAU OF STANDARDS

[May 29, 1830, the Senate adopted a motion directing "the Secretary of the Treasury to cause a comparison to be made of the standards of weight and measure used at the principal custom-houses of the United States, and to report to the Senate at the next session of Congress." Mar. 3, 1831, the Secretary of the Treasury reported that the work of comparing the standards of weight and measure was "commenced under the immediate superintendence of Mr. [Ferdinand Rudolph] Hassler," giving an account of what had been done. Prof. Hassler, speaking of this work, says that he was engaged in the Treasury Department "in comparing the weights and measures used at the custom-houses of the United States, and ascertaining by experiment the proper hydrometer proofs of liquor." Such large discrepancies were found in the standards of weight and measure that the Secretary of the Treasury directed that standards be adopted by the Treasury Department, and that copies be made and distributed to the various custom-houses. Congress, by joint resolution approved June 14, 1836, ordered that the Treasury Department should furnish each State with copies of these standards, and by act approved July 7, 1838, it was provided that the Secretary of the Treasury cause to be made under the superintendence of Mr. Hassler one standard balance for each State. By joint resolution approved July 27, 1865, a set of standard weights and measures of the metric system was ordered to be delivered to the governor of each State. By joint resolution approved Mar. 3, 1881, it was provided that a complete set of all the weights and measures adopted as standards should be delivered by the Secretary of the Treasury to the governor of each State for the use of agricultural colleges in the States, respectively, which have received a grant of land from the United States, and one set of the same to the Smithsonian Institution. In act approved Mar. 3, 1873, an appropriation was made for "standard weights and measures." In act approved June 20, 1878, "Standard Weights and Measures" appears in small capitals at the head of the paragraph making appropriations therefor, and this form was used until act approved Aug. 5, 1882, when the heading was "Office of Construction of Standard Weights and Measures." In 1891, it became the Office of Standard Weights and Measures, and so continued until July 1, 1901, when it became the National Bureau of Standards.

Prior to July 1, 1901, the office was under the Coast and Geodetic Survey; see T11. Transferred to Commerce and Labor Department July 1, 1903, under name of Standards Bureau; see C13.

See, for history of this bureau, report of superintendent of Coast and Geodetic Survey, 1890, p. 735 (T11.1: 890), and Organization and law of Department of Commerce and Labor, p. 413 (C1.2:Or3.)

(date)

[There seems to be no report on the construction of standards of weights and measures after Prof. Hassler's appointment as superintendent of the Coast Survey, Aug. 9, 1832, except by correspondence, until 1856. In 1834 and 1835 the Coast Survey was under the Navy Department and the construction of standards of weights and measures under the Treasury Department, so it was not possible that there should be any reports of the latter in the reports of the Coast Survey. When the Coast Survey was again placed under the Treasury Department, in 1836, the annual reports of the Coast Survey usually included the operations of the construction of the standards of weights and measures. When the office was separated from the Coast and Geodetic Survey, in 1901, and it became the National Bureau of Standards, it began issuing annual reports.]
