- [Miss Adelaide R. Hasse is our authority for the following statement as to Senate and House manuals: They are "an outgrowth of Jefferson's manual, first published in 1800, republished in two variations in 1801, and of which the 2d edition was printed in 1812. From time to time as ordered by the Senate, not for each session, new editions were issued. Gradually the form was changed and Jefferson's manual was subordinated and the Senate rules were given precedence. In the early years, there may be found copies of the Senate rules and of Jefferson's manual in separate pamphlets for the same year. In general, these remarks apply also to the House manual. It is certain that for many years the same publication contained both House and Senate rules, and therefore being used in both Houses, it is not likely that there was, strictly speaking, a House manual and a Senate manual." Jefferson's manual was prepared by Thomas Jefferson for his own guidance as President of the Senate in the years of his Vice-Presidency, 1797-1801. The Public Documents Library is unable to give any further information concerning the editions prior to 1812, and it is probable that there are also later editions of which it has no information.]
