

SI 2. ETHNOLOGY BUREAU

[Ethnological research was formerly part of the work of the Geographical and Geological Survey of Rocky Mountain Region (I 17.), which was merged in the Geological Survey (I 19.) by act approved Mar. 3, 1879 (Stat. L. v. 20, p. 394). In that act Congress provided that the ethnological work should be carried on under the Smithsonian Institution. Thus the Ethnology Bureau was established.

Besides publishing the annual reports and bulletins authorized by Congress, the Ethnology Bureau has completed the publication of Contributions to North American ethnology (I 17.5:), a series which was begun by the former Geographical and Geological Survey of Rocky Mountain Region under the direction of the Interior Department.

The name "Bureau of Ethnology" appears on the title-pages of annual reports up to and including the 15th report, 1894, since which the form "Bureau of American Ethnology" has been used. The latter is the official name of the bureau.]
